GLOBAL ENGAGEMENT MINOR

INTRODUCTION

Wesleyan University’s strengths in language studies, study abroad, civic engagement, social justice, and experiential learning are brought together in the Global Engagement Minor (GEM). Global engagement is a critical and yet diffuse goal. In order to provide GEM with theoretical and pedagogical coherence, we employ the idea of “intercultural competence.” Intercultural competence is not a state that one achieves, once-and-for-all; it is a process and an attitude. GEM is thus not an effort to certify who has intercultural competence and who does not, but rather a structured integration of a student’s academic studies, co-curricular activities, and experiential learning in order to reflect on and further cultivate each participant’s intercultural development and global engagement.

There are several definitions of intercultural competence in the existing literature, such as Bennett’s “a set of cognitive, affective, and behavioral skills and characteristics that support effective and appropriate interaction in a variety of cultural contexts.” We seek to build on such ideas while also explicitly integrating a critically informed approach to globalization into our framework. This results in a multi-faceted “competence” that consists of the mutually reinforcing knowledge, skills, and attitudes needed to understand, relate to, and engage constructively with the experiences of others. We understand “cultures” to be porous, fluid, internally contested, and often overlapping — and yet still to be vital realities shaping the lived experiences of all people. Building intercultural competence requires not just acquiring new knowledge but also practicing the skills and honing the attitudes that are needed to interact effectively and appropriately on a basis of informed, mutual respect. Such respect requires, and the GEM reinforces, a reflection on one’s own position in the world and one’s conceptualization of self.

ADMISSION TO THE MINOR

Students may apply to the GEM during Spring of their first year. They will be considered part of the GEM group after they have been accepted to participate and they have enrolled in the GEM Introductory Seminar offered in the Fall of their sophomore year. The application will consist of a letter of interest stating why the Global Engagement Minor fits into the student’s academic plans, and a brief recommendation from a professor at Wesleyan. Admission of students to the program in the Fall of their sophomore year or later may be possible via petition.

MINOR REQUIREMENTS

REQUIREMENT 1: INTRODUCTORY SEMINAR

Complete the 0.5-credit “Introduction to Global Engagement” seminar (CGST 205).

- This introductory GEM seminar provides a set of frameworks and activities to help students process their intercultural experiences, and an initial opportunity to collectively reflect on, critically analyze, and brainstorm about how to act on what they have learned.
- In particular, Introduction to Global Engagement will provide students with the tools to gain insight into their own cultural rules and biases; analyze how their own experiences have shaped these rules, and learn how to recognize and respond to cultural biases. It will also provide students with a framework to articulate a complex understanding of cultural differences and how they are inflected through power, privilege, and oppression.
- Students will set up and learn to use the e-portfolio software in the introductory seminar and will be able to add to it over their three years in the GEM.
- The Assistant Director of Intercultural and Language Learning will work with faculty and staff colleagues to develop the syllabi for this seminars, building around the learning goals and objectives articulated above (see table, Intercultural Competence Learning Goals).

REQUIREMENT 2: GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE COURSEWORK

Complete 4 full-credit courses dealing with at least 3 world regions, defined as:

- Global
- East Asia / Pacific
- Europe and Eurasia
- Latin America
- Middle East and North Africa
- South and Central Asia
- Sub-Saharan Africa
- United States and Canada
- A wide range of courses from across the curriculum can satisfy the GEM Global Perspective Coursework requirement. One’s “home” region(s) can count; a single region can count for two of the three regions if two courses engage with significantly different aspects of the region (e.g., the experiences of Indigenous peoples and of colonizers); and pan-global courses can also count toward one of the three regions.
- The following examples illustrate a few of the ways in which this requirement may be satisfied:
  - Student A, a dance major interested in GEM for the ways it brings new perspectives and coherence to bear on their coursework:
    - DANC 205, Afro-Brazilian Dance: Dances of the Orixás
    - DANC261, Bharata Natyam I: Introduction of South Indian Classical Dance
    - DANC 362, Bharata Natyam II: Embracing the Traditional and the Modern
    - DANC 354, Improvisation: Diasporic Modalities
  - Student B, a government and economics major. This example illustrates that one pathway through the GEM Global Perspective Coursework mirrors current International Relation Certificate coursework:
    - AMST 200, Colonialism and Its Consequences in the Americas
    - ECON 366, The Economics of Developing Countries
    - GOVT 284, Comparative Politics of Western Europe
    - HIST 212, Modern Africa
  - Student C, a STEM major taking an interdisciplinary set of courses in the arts, humanities, and social sciences
    - ENGL 254, India and the World: Fiction and Film About India and Globalization
    - ANTH 218, The Arab Street: Pop Culture and Media between Muslim Worlds
• CIS 375, Mass Extinctions in the Oceans: Animal Origins to Anthropocene
• BIOL 173, Global Change and Infectious Disease

Coursework will be tracked within each student’s GEM Certification Form; students will consult with their GEM advisor to ensure that a course will count, which will be tracked by selecting the course through the form’s “override” function.

REQUIREMENT 3: CAPSTONE SEMINAR
Complete the 0.5-credit GEM Capstone Seminar hosted by the Fries Center for Global Studies

• As part of this seminar, GEM students are expected to complete an e-portfolio that will synthesize their experiences from all requirements. The e-portfolio requires students to reflect on their intercultural development, knowledge, and skills gained throughout the GEM program and to interpret intercultural experience from the perspectives of their own and others’ worldviews. GEM seniors will present their e-portfolio to other participants and to the advisors of the program.

REQUIREMENT 4: LANGUAGE PROFICIENCY
Intermediate proficiency in two or more languages, including one’s native language(s). This requirement can be met in several ways:

• Taking language courses through the intermediate level (as defined by the relevant department; often four semesters of college-level coursework)
• Demonstrating intermediate (or greater) proficiency gained outside of Wesleyan; native speakers of languages other than English can simply inform their GEM adviser of their proficiency.
• For multilingual students, taking any subject course taught in English shows sufficient proficiency in English.

REQUIREMENT 5: CULTURAL IMMERSION OFF-CAMPUS
GEM students need to choose an off-campus experience as a focus for reflection with their cohort members and via their e-portfolio. Options for satisfying this requirement include:

• Study Abroad for at least one semester
• Internationally focused internship or fellowship abroad or in the U.S.
• Internationally focused service-learning abroad or in the U.S.
• Internationally located research experience

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION
Routine administration of the GEM will be handled by the FCGS Assistant Director of Intercultural and Language Learning, supported by the FCGS Administrative Assistant and overseen both by the FCGS Director and by the GEM Advisory Committee, composed of interested faculty and staff. This Advisory Committee will meet once per semester to review the status of the Certificate program. The core of the initial committee will be the members of the current taskforce.

Each year, one member (faculty or staff) of the GEM Advisory Committee will serve as GEM advisor for each group of up to 10 students in the entering cohort, and will remain as these students’ advisor throughout their three years in the program. The Assistant Director of Intercultural and Language Learning will also provide advising support for all GEM students, as well as take primary responsibility for organizing the Introductory and Capstone Seminars, although these courses will be team-taught with support from both faculty and staff.
